From the desk of the Chief

Exceeding our community's expectations and achieving a high level of satisfaction among residents and businesses has been at the center of the Citrus Heights Police Departments success for more than a decade. To reach such a high level of success found within CHPD today wasn't easy, and it was not generated by accident or conjured up out of thin-air with a magic wand. It took vision, leadership, hard work, dedication, and a collective commitment to an idea that others outside the organization may have had difficulty believing could be achieved. Being the new Police Chief at CHPD for only a few months, I want to readily point out that none of this success has anything to do with me, and everything to do with my predecessor as well as devotion of the professionals in the department which I recently took command of on October 31, 2016, more than ten years after the Department first opened its' doors. But being the new Chief from outside the organization uniquely situates me in a position to conduct an unbiased assessment of the organization and a responsibility to move the Department forward to its' next chapters of success.

My assessment of CHPD today is this:

Since 2006, the professional men and women of your police department have achieved tremendous accomplishments. They have collectively reduced crime and traffic collisions in overwhelming numbers, built a team of leaders driven by high-standards, developed sustainable systems to ensure a continuing top-quality service, and as a result of these, have established a glowing reputation; a reputation that continues not just within our local community, but throughout the region and state as a model of policing for other law enforcement organizations to emulate. Each local community throughout our Nation is uniquely different, and each has its' own set of values and expectations that a local police or sheriff's department should meet. The CHPD has established itself as an exemplary agency with strong community ties and great relationships, creating a solid foundation for a very bright future.

Much like professional athletes, our police professionals have dedicated themselves to a level of performance that far exceeds the average and sets a high standard in the policing profession. They are committed to performing their duties at a level of their very best, all the time, and they strive for nothing short of excellence.

I know this all sounds amazing and almost too good to be true. But it is our good fortune that the CHPD has been positioned very well to continue its successes and provide a stellar level of service to our community and the policing profession.

Is there still work to be done? Yes, of course there is. In fact, there is every bit as much work quickly emerging in front of us over the next ten years, as there was during the previous decade. In today's rapidly changing era of policing, there is not only much more work to be accomplished, but the type of work and the manner in which we do it is being reshaped and redefined in ways our criminal justice system has never before experienced. CHPD will need to be at the forefront of policing in the future and continue to be a leader during this unfolding reality. This is where my responsibility as your new Police Chief begins; ensuring the sustainability of exceeding our community's expectations and achieving high satisfaction levels among our residents and businesses while simultaneously driving the direction and future of CHPD into the next chapters of the policing profession. I will share more about that in a future REACH Out article, but rest assured that your police department continues to serve you, our Citrus Heights community, first and foremost.

Finances, staffing Citrus Heights' first concerns

By JIM DRONCAN
Community Editor

The process of building a new city has begun.

While not officially sworn into office, the Citrus Heights City Council met for the first time last Thursday night and plans to meet again this Thursday and next Tuesday to put together the staff and resources needed when the city becomes a reality July 1. And the council will likely meet downtown financing to pay its bills until revenue begins pouring into the city treasury in the spring of 1997.

After praise, congratulations and promises of support, the first council members began the process of building Sacramento

Citrus's fifth municipality - the most populous in state history at the time of incorporation. A large crowd packed the Patio Room at the Executive Recreation and Park Center's Ranch Park. Still photographers and cameramen from at least two television stations attended the initial session.

COME JOIN YOUR NEIGHBORS!

Your Local Neighborhoods Help Make Citrus Heights a Great Place to Live!

Get involved and make a positive impact in your neighborhood!

Whether you are new to Citrus Heights and still unpacking your moving boxes, or if you've lived here since cityhood was just a gleam in the eye of a few, we encourage you to check out your local Neighborhood Area (NA) group to see how those involved make such a difference in their respective communities. You can too!

Citrus Heights is divided into 11 neighborhoods, each of which is represented by its respective group of residents (see map). There are ten different neighborhood groups (areas 7 and 8 are combined) that meet once a month. These popular meetings, commonly referred to as NA Meetings, allow residents to address neighborhood issues (e.g. traffic or crime), work on various projects, host City staff for informational presentations, and much more. Interestingly, the public recently voted creation of the numbered neighborhoods one of Citrus Heights' Top 10 Accomplishments since incorporation in January 1997.

The NA's are an excellent opportunity to get to know your neighbors, work together to preserve the quality of life enjoyed in your neighborhood, and stay current on what is going on in the City: trends, events, information, alerts. There is no cost to join an NA and you do not have to own a home in order to belong. Anyone who lives, rents, or owns property or a business in Citrus Heights can get involved.

All of the NA's are part of REACH (Residents' Empowerment Association of Citrus Heights). REACH is a coalition that consists of a board of directors comprised of a representative from each neighborhood. REACH represents the interests of the community and its citizens, encouraging participation to preserve the quality of life in our city. REACH meets the 1st Monday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the Community Room at City Hall (6360 Fountain Square Drive).
